Overview

One of the remote and traditional regions of Nepal is the Annapurnas where your journey starts with lush green landscapes along with snow capped mountains and world-class views. Probably one of the classical treks in Nepal, Annapurna Base Camp (ABC) trek offers breathtaking sights at every corner and gives opportunity to the visitors to experience the typical Gurung villages and their way of living a traditional life in the Himalayas. The ABC trail goes passing through spectacular and serene landscapes, charming Gurung villages, lush green valleys filled with Rhododendron, bamboo and alpine forests to the trek's final destination, Annapurna Base Camp at the height of 4130m (13546ft.)

ABC trek starts from Pokhara in the foothills of the Annapurna and goes through different terrains. The trek is indifferently full of ups and downs on the rough trail. Annapurna base camp at 4,130 m is a funnel-shaped valley with panoramic inspection of Annapurna South, Annapurna I (8,091 m), Tent peak, Fishtail and others. Melting snow of the immense rock faces form a glacier that drains into the Modi River. Annapurna I is the tenth highest peak in the world and is the first of the 8,000 m peak climbed as early as in 1950.

The ABC trek is often done in combination with the Poonhill trek, trekking for this route starts at Nayapul from where trekking continues to Ghorepani. Trekkers usually overnight here hiking to Poon Hill (3210 m) for sunrise after which the route continues via Tadapani towards Annapurna Base Camp (ABC). It can also be done by following the trail from Chhomrung and then continuing towards Sinuwa, Bamboo, Machhapuchre Base Camp (MBC) and then finally to ABC.
